

MUSICAL AND DRAMATIC.

"Il Trovatore" by the Parepa-Rosa Troupe. Last evening the Academy of Music was again filled to repletion, the opera given being Verdi's Il Trovatore, which has obtained such a hold upon the affections of the lovers of music that it seldom fails to draw a good house, and on special occasions, such as a benefit of a popular and pleasing artist like Mr. Castle, is sure to draw an overwhelming one.

INFERNAL CRUELTY.

Trial of a Man for the Murder of His Son.—A Sheriff of Haverhill, Mass., writes: "I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of your kind letter of the 15th inst. in relation to the case of the late George Dixon, who was executed for the murder of his son, on the 15th inst. of the month of February, 1867. The main testimony in the former case was that of Dixon's wife, or a woman claiming to be his wife, but who had a husband living when last heard from. Her evidence was admitted on the ground that the marriage with Dixon was illegal. This was held as error by the Supreme Court (18 Mich., 34), and Dixon was brought back to this country for a new trial. Dixon is a man of middle height, grey eyes, and brown hair. His countenance is coarse, and his general appearance indicates a sullen disposition and a low order of intellect. He is a man of about forty or fifty years of age, and is the father of four children, James is the one that died on January 24, 1868, and whose death was caused by cruel treatment received at the hands of his father. This child seemed to be the chief object of his father's hatred, and fell a victim to very cruel treatment and privation. After burial the body of a boy was taken up and examined by Drs. Cutler and Beech, and on the trial Dr. J. H. Beech testified that he examined the child's body February 4, after it was taken up. Over the right eye was found a discolored spot, and in cutting through no injured bone was found. The flesh part appeared as if it had been bruised, but the injury was not a serious one. The heels and toes were found to have been frozen during life. Both of the heels were mortified, and the flesh partially separated from the bone. From the appearance of the feet, the freezing had taken place some time before. There was blood settled in one part of the heart, and portions near the back were of a dark, greenish hue, as if blood had settled there during life. In cutting through the heart he came to a rough bone, and on examination it was found that the breast-bone had been broken through as by severe violence. By its appearance, it must have been injured three or four weeks before. The muscles over the heart and of the left side had a dark red appearance, but on the other side they were of a light flesh-color. There was an appearance of disease of the heart. The bruises in and about the heart could not have occurred over twenty-four hours before death, and were sufficient to cause death. Thomas Dixon testified that he was 11 years old, and that George Dixon was his father; that Jimmy, the brother older than himself, died one night; that Jimmy slept in the same bed with him and his sister that night; on the day before, in the afternoon, Jimmy was sitting on the steps, and his father came out and threw him down in the woodshed, and got on him with his knees; Jimmy was sitting on the steps crying because his feet were frozen, when his father came out; his father was mad because he did not say wood. Other witnesses were called, who testified that on different times, from three weeks to six months previous to the boy's death, they had seen Dixon pull his son James down and kick him several times; that at one time he struck him with a handspike, at another with a shovel, and inflicted many other cruelties which are sickening to relate. Dixon's statement was to the effect that he did not mean to hurt the boy, and if he was hurt at all it was by falling from a chair in which he was sitting to have his feet dressed the night before his death. The testimony was closed at 10 o'clock, and in the afternoon the jury returned a verdict of guilty.
